RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

University of Minnesota, Institute of Child Development, Minneapolis, MN

Project Competence, a longitudinal study of competence and resilience in a normative urban sample of school children recruited in the late 1970s.

Dissertation Research (2000-2003) under the direction of Ann Masten, Ph.D., and Auke Tellegen, Ph.D., Advisors. Thesis: The Nature of Independent Adversity in the Lives of Resilient and Maladaptive Youth: A Comparative Analysis.

Project Coordinator (September 1999 – May 2000; August 2001 - January 2002)

- Oversaw daily research operations in close collaboration with principal investigator Dr. Ann Masten, when for the fourth time in its 20-year history, the project collected data for a new assessment. Competence, life event, symptom and personality questionnaires were obtained from subjects, their parents, romantic partners, friends, and employers.
- Recruited undergraduate students and supervised four under-graduate and six graduate students to carry out this task.
- Elicited participation from and maintained contact with the most challenging participants.
- In charge of administration, including bookkeeping.

Research Assistant (October 1991 – January 2002)

- Co-created a measure of lifetime stress exposure (using life charts and over 20,000 life events, from multiple measures), consisting of clinical ratings on scales that distinguished between types of adversity and developmental periods.
- Trained and coordinated the work of nine raters of stress exposure.
- Co-authored a peer-reviewed, published article on the methodology developed for measuring lifetime adversity and stress at various developmental periods.
- Participated in the creation of a composite measure of childhood personality for use on the longitudinal project.
- Helped develop rating scales for the assessment of competence, health, psychopathology, and global adaptation in young adulthood, and produced clinical ratings on these scales for our subjects based on their recent report on questionnaires.

Research Award: Ewa O. Miller Fellowship, 1994 - 1995
